2nd Annual Northwest World History Association Conference Program Portland State University, Portland October 22-23, 2005

Saturday, October 22

7:30-8:00 am

Registration and Coffee/muffins

Session 1: 8:00-10:00 am

The Regional Goes Global: Economics, Development, and Labor in World History

Papers: African Empire, 1900-1960: Economic Assessment by Balance Sheet or Systemic Diagnosis?

Patrick Manning, Northeastern University

19th century Indian labor diaspora in a world history perspective, or marronage in a global context - themes and considerations

Amitava Chowdhury, Washington State University, Pullman

No Longer Made of Corn: Development and Cultural Change among the Yucatan Mava

David Galaty, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay

Chair/Comment: Candice Goucher, Washington State University, Vancouver

10:00-10:15 am Coffee break

Session 2: 10:15 am-12:15 pm

Education and Empire: Global Comparisons

Papers: Reimagining Reservations: A Gendered Response to Assimilationist Policies at the Fort Hall Indian Reservation

Amy Canfield, Washington State University, Pullman

Ireland as a Case Study of Imperial Education: Evidence and Implications

Aaron Whelchel, Washington State University, Pullman

U.S. Education Policy in the Philippines 1898-1913: A Policy Contradiction

James Covi, Washington State University, Pullman

Chair/Comment: Eric Martin, Lewis-Clark State College

Lunch: 12:15-1:30

Special Plenary Session: 1:30-2:30 pm

Speaker: Judith Zinsser, Miami University, Ohio

Gender and World Historians

Session 3: 2:45-3:45 pm

Gendering World History and Putting the World into Gender, Part I

Papers: Gender and Empire in The Rangoon Rape Trial of 1902

Jeremy Neill, Menlo College

Feminine Identities in Masculine Cultures of Violence: The Cult of Thuggee and

American Cholismo

Mark Moreno, Washington State University

Chair/Comment: Heather Streets, Washington State University, Pullman

Session 4: 4:00-6:00 pm

Gendering World History and Putting the World into Gender, Part II

Papers: To the Effusion of her Blood: Marital Discord and Judicial Redress in

Reformation Scotland

Mary Elizabeth Stuart, Washington State University, Vancouver

Traces of a lost matriarchy: female initiation rites in the Sarashina Nikki

Eric Cunningham, Gonzaga University

Gender as a tool in "Bridging World History"

Candice Goucher, Washington State University, Vancouver

Linda Walton, Portland State University

Chair/Comment: Sue Peabody, Washington State University, Vancouver

Reception 6:30-7:30

Sunday, October 23

7:30-8:00 am

Coffee/bagels

Session 5: 8:00-10:30 am

Turning Conventional History into World History

Papers: Nuclear Weapons Proliferation as World History Jonathan Hagood, University of California, Davis Nexus of the Spirit: Late Nineteenth-Century Latin American Revolution and Nation-building from the Global Marketplace of Ideas
Armand Garcia, Washington State University, Pullman
The Threat of the Khilafat Movement: How Indian Nationalism Influenced the Creation of a Jewish National Home
Maryanne Rhett, Washington State University, Pullman
The Oregon Boundary Negotiations in World Perspective
Jon Flashnick, Arizona State University

Chair/Comment: Heather Streets, Washington State University, Pullman

10:30--10:45 Coffee break

Session 6: 10:45 am-11:45 pm

Plenary Session: Speaker, Peer Vries, University of Leiden The Rise of the West in Global Perspective

Lunch 11:45-12:45

Session 7: 12:45-2:45

Rethinking America in a Global Perspective: A Report and Discussion of the 2005 NEH/AHA Summer Institute on Renvisioning the U.S. History Survey Course

Presenters: Jim Davis, Mt. San Jacinto Community College, Menifee Valley Campus

Jane Hunter, Lewis and Clark College

Robert McCoy, Washington State University, Pullman

Session 8: 3:00-4:00

World History: Pedagogical Approaches

Papers: Window, Prism and Mirror: A Pedagogy of Historical Fiction in the Historical Classroom

Sue Peabody, Washington State University, Vancouver

Throwing Away Half of My Lectures or, Talk Less, Teach More: An Analysis

Heather Streets, Washington State University, Pullman